AMERICAN ARBITRATION ASSOCIATION

NEW YORK, NEW YORK

DONALD J. TRUMP FOR PRESIDENT,
INC., a Virginia not-for-profit corporation,

Claimant,

v.

ALVA JOHNSON, an individual

Respondent.

CASE NO. 01-19-0003-0216

ORDER OF THE ARBITRATOR DESIGNATING RESPONDENT STATUS AS PREVAILING PARTY AND GRANTS
APPLICATION FOR FEES & COSTS

Hon. Judge Victor Bianchini (Ret.), Arbitrator

I. INTRODUCTION AND PARTIAL PROCEDURAL HISTORY

This is Respondent’s application for fees and costs, predicated on her status as the prevailing party, such status she argues was established when the Arbitrator dismissed the case on Constitutional grounds. This arbitration was based on an alleged violation of a non-disclosure agreement (NDA) and was filed by Claimant under an arbitration provision of the NDA that provided for resolution of any dispute by arbitration. The NDA provides for an allocation of fees, based on contractual provisions in of the NDA. The NDA was entered into by the parties and was agreed to by Respondent as a condition of employment.

The Respondent has requested $373,501.60 in attorneys’ fees on behalf of both Tycko & Zavareei (“Tycko”) and the Public Justice, Inc. law firm (Public Justice), Respondent also requests expenses of $6,151.86. Respondent has requested arbitration fees and costs, because 1) the Arbitrator ordered Claimant to bear these expenses, subject to showing Respondent’s inability to pay at the conclusion of the Arbitration; and 2) based on Respondent’s sworn declaration filed in support, with attached documentation consisting of tax returns and income evidence she cannot pay, a condition imposed at the beginning of this case she could have to contribute unless she

1 could show she cannot do so. Said another way, the Arbitrator’s order was that she would be 2 excused from contribution, should she be unable to pay.

3 Thus, the arbitration having now been decided by way of a dismissal in its entirety on 4 Constitutional grounds, the time has now come to decide who is the prevailing party and whether 5 Attorneys’ fees and costs should be awarded, and, if so, how they are to be allocated and 6 calculated.

7 A. A Brief Procedural History:

8 This arbitration had its procedurally tortured beginnings following an encounter during a 9 campaign stop by then candidate Trump before the Presidential election. At a campaign stop, 10 Respondent and Trump had an encounter in a small trailer among several campaign workers.
11 Respondent related that, “during a presidential campaign rally in Tampa, Florida on August 24, 12 2016, in a campaign recreational vehicle (“RV”) filled with approximately 12 other people that 13 “[Mr.] Trump grasped her hand and did not let go. He told her he knew she had been on the road 14 for a long time and that she had been doing a great job. He also told Respondent he would not 15 forget about her, and that he would take care of her. “[H]e tightened his grip on [Respondent’s] 16 hand and leaned towards her. He moved close enough she could feel his breath on her skin.” 17 Respondent then claimed that she “suddenly realized that Defendant Trump was trying to kiss her 18 on the mouth,” and attempted to avoid this by turning her head to the right. Defendant Trump 19 kissed her anyway, and the kiss landed on the corner of her mouth.

20 Separate litigation then began between the parties, in what was a technically unrelated 21 federal lawsuit filed by Respondent as Alva Johnson v. Donald J. Trump and Donald J. Trump for 22 President, Inc., based on the alleged campaign stop encounter. (Case No. 8:19-cv-00475-WFJ- 23 SPF) in the U.S. District Court in the Middle District of Florida (Tampa), when Respondent (in 24 this action) sued as a plaintiff against the then Presidential candidate Donald J. Trump 25 (“Candidate”) for battery, and against the Candidate’s campaign organization, Donald J. Trump 26 for President, Inc., (“Claimant”) based on a claim of unequal pay founded on gender and race, on 27

1 February 25, 2019, approximately two and one-half years after her claimed alleged battery by 2 Candidate.

3 The Arbitrator notes that before her Florida federal lawsuit was filed, however, both at the 4 time of the encounter and during the next approximately two-and-one-half years, and before
5 Claimants demanded this arbitration, Respondent made numerous supportive and positive 6 statements about Candidate. Before filing her federal lawsuit, but after leaving her position with 7 the Campaign and shortly after Candidate’s successful election, Respondent sent one or more job 8 applications to the White House asking to be appointed to the important positions within the U.S.
9 Departments of State, Labor and Agriculture, including a position equivalent to the United States 10 Ambassador to Portugal. In a radio interview in 2017, she praised Trump with phrases like “the 11 nicest guy,” “incredible person,” “treats everyone as if they’re part of his family,”—acts and 12 statements inconsistent with a reasonable person’s reaction to having been battered. It is notable, 13 that after Candidate was elected president, Respondent applied for several positions in the new 14 Presidential Administration, but those applications went nowhere. Then, in 2019, Respondent 15 filed her lawsuit in Florida.

16 According to Claimant’s allegations, at the time of filing her complaint, Respondent was 17 represented by eight litigation attorneys from multiple law firms and that she and they “launched a 18 full-scale public relations assault on Candidate and the Campaign which included approximately 19 100 communications to national news reporters...”. The Claimant, in the federal action, stated that 20 it was not seeking to hold her liable for “in-court statements communicated by or on behalf of...”
21 Respondent. The defendants, the Campaign (the Claimant in this action), and the Candidate 22 prevailed before the U.S. District Court, (U.S. District Court Judge William Jung) who dismissed 23 the complaint in its entirety, without prejudice, because the lawsuit was “political,” effectively 24 admonishing Respondent that the court would try a tort and wage lawsuit, but not a political one.
25 Thus, the Court dismissed the entire matter in June 2019, without prejudice, meaning that 26 Respondent could refile after changing her Complaint.

1 1. The Video:

2 Following the entry of dismissal and before Respondent’s deadline to file an amended 3 complaint in the District Court, the Campaign (the Claimant in this Arbitration) surfaced a video 4 of the alleged “kiss” calling into question the truthfulness of the allegations of battery, and 5 submitted the video to the District Court. Judge Jung, after viewing the video, apparently 6 expressed surprise, called counsel and in a most appropriate manner, politely and professionally, 7 suggested there might be a “little bit of reflection, a little objectivity, more distant view of where 8 you’re going to go with this,” in an effort to give counsel for Respondent a perspective and gentle 9 guidance as to the viability of her case, should they file an amended complaint. After that phone 10 call, Respondent abandoned her claim and notified the court she was declining to amend her 11 pleading.

12 A true copy of the video, recorded by a campaign volunteer present at the time of the 13 incident was shared with this Arbitrator and counsel. Candidly, your Arbitrator observes that the 14 video demonstrating the interaction between Candidate and Respondent shows no inappropriate 15 conduct, leading to the conclusion that Respondent’s factual allegations regarding the August 16 2016 interaction were false.

17 The video shows a brief interaction between Respondent and Candidate, lasting only a few 18 seconds, inside of the campaign RV surrounded by numerous people who are not identified on 19 camera. In the Video, Respondent can be seen offering her cheek to Candidate and her lips are in 20 the air next to his cheek with Candidate’s mouth clear of her face. They are cheek-to-cheek. The 21 Arbitrator finds that the video shows that Candidate did not “forcibly kiss” Respondent, nor kiss 22 her mouth, nor attempt to kiss her mouth, as Respondent claimed in her lawsuit. No reasonable 23 person viewing this video could conclude that anything improper took place.¹

1 Ultimately, the Arbitrator dismissed this case on Constitutional grounds, using the 2 reasoning in two proceedings involving NDA either identical or substantially similar to the one in 3 this Arbitration. The Arbitrator employed those decisions as persuasive authority. As was 4 decided by the Arbitrator in a previous Order, that any other causes of action arising out of the 5 filing and dismissal of the federal lawsuit for battery, among other causes of action filed, are 6 unrelated to this set of claims and will not be the basis of any determination by the Arbitrator.

7 2. The First Motion to Dismiss:

8 In his July 23, 2020, decision on a Motion to Dismiss filed by Respondent, your Arbitrator
9 denied the Motion to Dismiss substantially and granted it in part, leaving intact the primary claims 10 of Claimant.^{2,3} During the pendency, several parallel cases had been filed involving other former 11 employees involving NDAs either identical to, or substantially similar to the NDA in this case.
12 One case, involving an identical NDA as this one, Denson v. Donald Trump for President, Inc., 13 (Denson II), Then, as hereinbefore mentioned, while the decision in Denson II was pending, 14 Respondent moved for a stay of proceedings until Denson II could be decided. The Arbitrator also 15 denied this motion, holding that the motion was premature.

16 3. The Second Motion to Dismiss:

17 The U.S. District Court for the Southern District of New York decided Denson II against 18 the Claimant, involving the Constitutionality of an NDA identical to this one. Respondent 19 renewed her Motion to Dismiss immediately after Denson II was rendered by the U.S. District 20 Court, Southern. District of California, U.S. District Court Judge Gardephe presiding. Then, while 21 her Motion to Dismiss before this Arbitrator was pending, she supplemented her Motion to 22 Dismiss with an additional case involving an employee of Claimant, former television personality

23 _____

2017: Johnson vows to “remain [a] vocal cheerleader[] for President Trump and his policies”).

25 ² After extensive briefing and oral argument, on July 23, 2020, the Arbitrator, in a 28-page Order, denied the Motion to Dismiss, wherein, amongst other rulings and based upon New York law, this Arbitrator held that the First Amendment to the U.S.
26 Constitution did not preclude considering the validity and enforceability of the non-disclosure agreement (NDA) in this case.

27 ³ Concurrently with the Motion to Dismiss on March 20, 2020, the parties disputed the categorization of the dispute as either “commercial” or “employment, affecting the fee-sharing aspects of the suit. In an Order filed on April 27, 2020, the Arbitrator 28 ruled under New York law that the Claimant would be required to advance fees with a final determination on allocation to be made at the conclusion of the case.

1 Omarosa Manigault-Newman, (“Manigault-Newman), a case rendered by a New York Arbitrator,⁴ 2 which addressed the Constitutionality of an identical confidentiality agreement and dismissed it.
3 And, the niece of the Candidate, Mary Trump, prevailed in an unrelated action based, the 4 Arbitrator believes, but is not certain, on Constitutional principles. Respondent has cited this 5 Manigault-Newman case decision as further support for the unconstitutionality of this NDA. Thus, 6 the Arbitrator’s dismissal was based on the principles and reasoning in the decisions rendered in 7 the Denson II and Manigault-Newman cases. Respondent has acknowledged these cases are 8 technically not precedent and has cited these decisions as persuasive authority, and the usage that 9 New York law allows. As mentioned, the Arbitrator relied on those two cases only as persuasive 10 authority.

11 II. THE PARTIES’ RESPECTIVE MOTIONS:

12 A. Respondent’s Motion for Fees as the Prevailing Party:

13 Respondent supports her motion for Fees and Costs because she prevailed by securing a 14 dismissal, becoming the prevailing party, and seeks to compensate the efforts of her attorneys who 15 defended her. Thus, she asks the Arbitrator to designate her as the prevailing party. In support of 16 this request, Respondent points out that the “NDA unambiguously awards ‘reasonable legal fees 17 and costs’ to the prevailing party.” She states that the matter before the Arbitrator was dismissed 18 in its entirety, and logic, law, and the NDA persuasively support this conclusion.

19 She emphasizes that her attorneys, at the beginning, procured a ruling that her case was an 20 employment case, and not a commercial case. This ruling required Claimant to bear the fees, at 21 least until it was determined that she could not afford cost-splitting of the of the arbitration costs.
22 Through counsel, Respondent represents that she still cannot afford the substantial arbitration 23 costs, having been unemployed until recently.

24 Counsel for Respondent in supporting fees, recounted the various and substantial motion 25 practice efforts engaged in defending Respondent. Besides discovery challenges, Motion practice 26 consisted of fee allocation, two motions to dismiss, discovery disputes, and several conferences

27 ⁴ Donald J. Trump for President, Inc. v. Omarosa Manigault Newman, AAA-Case No.: 01-18-0003-0751, issued September 24, 28 2021 (“Order”) by T. Andrew Brown, Arbitrator, (hereinafter “Manigault-Newman”), attached hereto as Exhibit “B.”

1 associated with disputes between the parties, including, but not limited to this fee allocation
2 dispute. In addition, Counsel followed two parallel cases, substantially similar at this arbitration, 3 and monitored those cases and informed the Arbitrator of the developments.

4 Counsel filed a detailed spreadsheet listing the work by the firm representing her, and 5 highlighted the many events that required them to engage in comprehensive representation, 6 including, but not limited to extensive motion practice. Counsel engaged in difficult discovery 7 efforts necessary to properly defend Respondent. Their work also included researching and 8 consulting potential expert witnesses who could examine damages. This activity, Respondent 9 argues, warrants granting her fees and costs motion.

10 B. Claimant's Opposition Arguments to Respondent's Motion for Fees as the 11 Prevailing Party:

12 1. On the Basis of Respondent's Inequitable Conduct:

13 Claimant opposes the award of fees and costs to the Respondent because this arbitration
14 and the preceding litigation was "based on a politically motivated lie." The "lie" that Claimant 15 refers to is because she filed a frivolous lawsuit in the U.S. District Court in Florida against both 16 Donald J. Trump, a candidate for the Presidency, and the Claimant, Donald J. Trump for 17 President, Inc., based on an allegation for battery, and for unequal pay based on gender and race.
18 Claimant characterizes the federal lawsuit as "a naked political lawsuit." In support of this 19 "political lawsuit" characterization, Claimant refers to the fact that Respondent and her lawyers 20 were partisans and donors to Democratic political candidates. Thus, Claimant allege that 21 Respondent and her eight lawyers engaged in a massive public relations assault on the candidate 22 and the Campaign, and repeating the same falsehood, presumably the battery charge. Thus, 23 Claimant, by this argument, suggests that Respondent's attorneys were somehow aware of the 24 falsity of the Battery charge, motivating Claimant's opposition to an award of fees.

25 Before Claimant could refile an amended complaint, a video surfaced that clearly 26 demonstrated that no battery took place and that the charge of battery was false. The Court 27 expressed its surprise and counseled Respondent to reconsider her lawsuit, and an amended

1 complaint was never filed by Respondent. Ms. Johnson later told the press she stood by her claim, 2 but there is no evidence her counsel knew of her false claim before the video surfaced, and 3 counsels' involvement was never litigated before the arbitrator. Claimant further alleges that 4 Respondent's illicit campaign included public statements disparaging and harassing Claimant and 5 the candidate. Thus, they argue that she should not profit by being awarded attorneys' fees and 6 costs and that Claimant should not be penalized by seeking to defend itself. In support of this 7 theme of applying equitable considerations and fairness, "because Respondent has acted in bad 8 faith throughout this arbitration," [emphasis supplied], citing Kralik v. 239 E. 70th St. Owners 9 Corp., 93 A.D.3d 569, 570 (2012). Claimant continues, "this discretion should be exercised 10 "where bad faith is established by the successful party or where unfairness is manifest." Citing 11 Jacreg Realty Corp. v. Barnes, 284 A.D.2d 280, 280 (2001). Equitable considerations and fairness 12 militate against an award of attorneys' fees in a party's favor where a party has made false 13 statements and committed misdeeds, including filing frivolous litigation with false charges. See 14 Flamm, 107 A.D.3d at 585. Notable, however, after alleging bad faith in this arbitration, Claimant 15 states that "Respondent's bad-faith conduct formed the basis of this action..." apparently 16 weakening a narrative that bad faith occurred in this Arbitration. Further conflating the federal 17 action with this arbitration, Claimant states that "given Respondent's egregious actions, there is no 18 question that Respondent has acted in bad faith throughout this arbitration and that it would be 19 manifestly unfair for Respondent to profit from her vicious, false statements regarding President 20 Trump and his Campaign. Thus, the Fee Petition should be denied." [Emphasis supplied].

21 Essentially, Claimant's argument is that Respondent's inequitable behavior in the federal 22 case should carry over. Thus, Respondent should not be rewarded by awarding her attorneys' 23 fees, costs, and expenses and by extension, paying her attorneys because her attorneys aided her 24 even after the dismissal of the federal case, she continued her "lie," with the aid of her attorneys.

25 2. Because the Fee Provision is Void as a Matter of Law:

26 Claimant Alleges that Respondent is not entitled to attorney's fees "because the Agreement 27 is one entire, non-severable document and thus the fee provision is not severable from the rest of

1 the Agreement and is void.” In support of this argument, Claimant cites Hooper Assoc., 74 N.Y.2d 2 at 491, and F & K Supply, Inc. 732 N.Y.S.2d at 738, for the proposition that “where a court has 3 invalidated critical portions of an agreement, courts will find the voided portions of the agreement 4 non-severable and void the entire agreement. Yet in Hooper, the rule was that while ordinarily a 5 prevailing party may not collect from the loser, it is permissible when “an award is authorized by 6 agreement of the parties, statute or court rule.” [Emphasis supplied]. Finally, as to the 7 enforcement of an attorneys’ fees provision, Counsel for Claimant repeats its equitable argument
8 that Respondent’s inequitable conduct is a basis for non-enforcement of the attorneys’ fees 9 provision. In support of this argument, it cites a court ruling that held “a contract assuming that 10 [attorney’s fees] obligation must be strictly construed to avoid reading into it a duty which the 11 parties did not intend to be assumed.” Thus, Claimant argues because of her “lie,” the arbitrator 12 should not enforce the attorneys’ fees provision. As a basis for supporting their argument they cite 13 333 E 49th Partners LP v. Flamm, 107 A.D.3d 584, 585 (2013), for the proposition that when the 14 “moving party has made false statements and acted in bad faith” should not be awarded attorney’s 15 fees, even with an attorney’s fees provision.

16 Finally, Claimant argues that because the Arbitrator “voided critical portions of the 17 Agreement, including the confidentiality and non-disparagement provisions, which are the key 18 provisions discussing the consideration provided by Respondent in entering the Agreement, and 19 thus the entire Agreement including the fee provision is non-severable and likewise void,” (citing 20 F & K Supply, Inc., supra), a conclusion that the Arbitrator will address below.

21 3. That the Respondent’s Fee Request is Unreasonable & Unsupported:

22 Claimant states that Respondent’s fee request should be denied because it is “conclusory 23 and speculative...and manifestly unreasonable and unsupported.” It further states she has 24 “failed...her burden to show she is entitled to attorneys’ fees and a...reasonable basis for those 25 fees. Their specific arguments follow:

a. No Reasonable, Supported Estimate:

Claimant continues by stating that her “estimate underpinning her fee application is speculative, unreasonable, and unsupported by any reliable evidence.” In its attack on the fees request, Claimant states that “Respondent has failed to adequately document and support the hours she claims were expended...[b]ut fails to provide contemporaneous fee records to support her fee petition, which dooms the petition.” Principally, this objection is premised on the fee records being not “contemporaneous...because they were improperly created in a post-hoc fashion to justify the Fee Petition.” Claimant reaches this conclusion because “it appears that Claimant’s lawyers have used paralegals and assistants to create post-hoc estimates for the amounts of time they have spent on this arbitration, which...cannot support the reasonableness of a fee application. Therefore, Claimant asserts, the records are not “contemporaneous fee records.”

Thus, Claimant states that Respondent has failed to substantiate her claim for attorneys’ fees and that her claim for fees fails, as a matter of law.

b. Claimant Alleges Respondent Not Entitled to Expenses:

Respondent has claimed $6,151.86 in expenses. Claimant argues that the claim is meritless. They oppose it on their main theme that her bad faith actions and inequitable conduct precludes it. It also argues that because the Agreement is not severable, there can be no award. Finally, it argues there is no evidence these expenses were actually incurred and there is no indication the costs are reasonable.

4. That Agreement Does Not Provide for a Fee Award In the Circumstances:

This argument is based on the observation that because the matter was dismissed, and that the Arbitrator invalidated critical portions of the agreement, neither Respondent nor Claimant has received an arbitration award, it does not result in an arbitration award upon which attorneys’ fees can be awarded.

1 1. The Claimant Asks the Arbitrator to Apply Respondent’s Behavior
2 In the Federal Case to this Arbitration:

3 The Arbitrator observes that one of Claimant’s primary themes in opposing the fee
4 application is that Respondent’s federal lawsuit, in which she falsely claimed that Donald J.
5 Trump the candidate for President had battered her, caused this litigation and because her conduct 6 led to this expensive arbitral proceeding, she should not be rewarded for her causal dishonesty 7 granting her application for attorneys’ fees and costs. Thus, Claimant argues, this conduct justifies 8 their opposition to her application for fees and costs in the action it brought to enforce the NDA.
9 Their brief opposing Respondent’s application for fees, promotes its causation argument 10 throughout, and makes the argument alternating between that she “acted in bad faith throughout 11 this arbitration” to alleging that her conduct “formed the basis for this arbitration.”

12 a.) Respondent’s Federal Lawsuit:

13 There is no question, in the Arbitrator’s opinion that, based upon the video of the 14 encounter with Candidate Trump and Respondent, that no improper conduct by Candidate Trump 15 took place. No objective person could view the video of the encounter as anything even remotely 16 supporting an accusation of battery, kissed, assaulted or anything else similar. The federal judge 17 saw it, and the Arbitrator sees it. In the Arbitrator’s decision to dismiss the underlying action, he 18 noted that the Respondent was untruthful in her accusations against the Candidate. Thus, it is 19 understandable that Claimant would be upset that a claim for $373,501.45 in attorney’s fees and 20 costs could be made and ultimately awarded. But, to blame the cause of this arbitration on 21 Respondent is misguided and incorrect.

22 b.) This Genesis of this Arbitration:

23 Claimant continues to promote the narrative that the Arbitration came about because of her 24 false accusation. But Claimant should know this narrative is unsupportable. That Claimant is 25 ambivalent about how to transfer Respondent’s conduct in the Federal lawsuit to this arbitration, 26 demonstrates the difficulty it has had in its attempt to deprive her of the status of prevailing party.
27 From a legal standpoint there is no way to transfer her civil conduct in the federal forum to this

1 one. I understand Claimant's frustration, but I cannot act on it for the reasons stated above and 2 below:

3 c.) Claimant Had Choices After Dismissal of the Federal Lawsuit:

4 Without engaging in a lengthy analysis of what remedies were available to Claimant based 5 on the behavior of Respondent, Claimant could have filed for malicious prosecution or defamation 6 in an appropriate forum, but did not do so. Clearly either or both of these causes of action might 7 have had merit. Claimant seemed to inferentially argue that the Arbitration action was initiated to 8 curtail Respondent's alleged wide proselytizing of the false narrative that the Candidate had 9 battered her. This theory is not accepted by the Arbitrator. Claimant was invested in silencing 10 other employees that were terminated or had somehow criticized the Candidate in other ways, 11 such as in Denson II or the Manigault-Newman cases, by enforcing the same NDA provision 12 where in those cases there were no false allegations of battery by the Candidate. Claimant's 13 demand for Arbitration appears to have been principally motivated by upholding its NDA and 14 curtailing any criticism of the Candidate.

15 Claimant may have had legitimate reasons to do so, but did not pursue those alternative 16 tort claims. Instead, Claimant demanded arbitration of an NDA now determined to be 17 unconstitutional in four forums.⁵ Claimant did so in the face of Respondent's strong opposition in 18 this arbitration on Constitutional grounds from its inception. Claimant sued on the arbitration 19 provision in its unconstitutional NDA, to silence Respondent as Claimant did in the Denson II and 20 Manigault-Newman cases on the general criticisms of the campaign and the Candidate. But even 21 if that was not their motive, the enforcement of the NDA was an inappropriate choice because of 22 its unconstitutionality.

23 2. Claimant Has Not Acted In Bad Faith in this Arbitration:

24 Although Claimant alleges that Respondent "acted in bad faith throughout this 25 arbitration," yet the Arbitrator did not observe and has found no bad faith exhibited by 26 Respondent in this Arbitration. Notably, the Arbitrator was given no evidence that Respondent

27 _____
28 ⁵ Denson II, Manigault-Newman, Johnson, and possibly Mary Trump.

1 continued her false accusation during this Arbitration. Yes, Respondent filed a federal lawsuit and 2 falsified the event at the campaign stop. The falsity was dramatically revealed when the video of 3 the encounter between her and the Candidate surfaced. She declined to refile the Federal lawsuit 4 as a consequence. There were allegations she continued her false narrative after she declined to 5 refile it, but those allegations were not a part of the Arbitration because the matter was dismissed 6 by the Arbitrator on Constitutional grounds; but, even had they been, there would have been 7 additional Constitutional issues implicating free speech. Rather, Respondent defended herself, 8 with the able assistance of her attorneys, and they did so, as the Arbitrator could determine, 9 exceptionally competently and ethically.

10 The cases cited by Claimant supporting the proposition that bad faith prevents a 11 designation as a prevailing party, involve bad faith conduct in the same case as the one where fees
12 were sought. See Kralik v. 239 E. 70th St. Owners Corp., 93 A.D.3d 569, 570 (2012), and Jacreg
13 Realty Corp. v. Barnes, 284 A.D.2d 280, 280 (2001).

14 Claimant's effort to defend against imposing a fee request because Respondent's conduct 15 was in bad faith is rejected, because those acts were committed in a jurisdictionally separate and 16 factually different proceeding, with unrelated causes of action, e.g., battery, and wage claim. It 17 could have ended at that point. But Claimant then filed this claim in arbitration on an 18 unconstitutional non-disclosure agreement. That was Claimant's choice, but it didn't carry into 19 this Arbitration Respondent's false accusation against Candidate.

20 Finally, the Arbitrator has consistently held, including in his ruling in the November 21, 21 2021, Motion to Dismiss the Federal Action, that the causes of action arising out of the filing and 22 dismissal of the federal action for battery, among other causes of action, "are not a part of this set 23 of claims and will not be the basis of any determination by the Arbitrator."

24 3. Conclusion:

25 The Arbitrator concludes that Respondent is the prevailing party, because there has been 26 no inequitable or bad conduct by her in this Arbitration. The Arbitrator will now focus on the 27 challenges made by Claimant to the calculation of fees.

1 B. Respondent's Alleged Flawed Motion for Fees:

2 1. The Fee-Shifting Agreement is Not Null and Void:

3 Claimant argues that the fee petition fails on five grounds: a.) fees should not be awarded 4 because Respondent's inequitable conduct precludes an award; b.) the prevailing party provision, 5 is void because the Arbitrator found the allegedly non-severable confidentiality and non-6 disparagement provisions in the agreement are likewise void; c.) even if awardable, the fee motion 7 fails to provide a reasonable basis to determine the fees; d.) that because the Arbitration was 8 dismissed, there is no arbitration award upon which to award fees; and e.) that the fee-shifting 9 provision is invalid and against public policy.

10 a. Argument that Respondent's Conduct Precludes an Award:

11 This argument was addressed in Section III., A. 1. Thus, the Arbitrator rejects this 12 argument for ruling in Claimant's favor on the Fee Motion.

13 b. The Prevailing Party Provision is Not Null and Void:

14 Claimant advances the argument that because the Arbitrator invalidated the NDA, because 15 the "Agreement is one entire, non-severable document, and thus the fee provision is not severable 16 from the rest of the agreement and is void." In support of this argument, it cites Hooper Assoc., 74 17 N.Y.2d at 491 and F & K Supply, Inc., 732 N.Y.S.2d at 738. As its argument goes, "where a court 18 has invalidated critical portions of an agreement, courts will find the voided portions of the 19 agreement non-severable and void the entire agreement." Thus, "[b]ecause the Arbitrator voided 20 critical portions of the Agreement, including the confidentiality and non-disparagement 21 provisions, which were the key considerations pledged by Respondent in the agreement, and 22 because the agreement lacks a severability clause, the fee provision in the agreement is also void." 23 Claimant also argues that "the agreement is entire and that the fee provision is not severable and 24 thus void." Claimant stresses that whether a contract is entire is one of intention of the parties and 25 that one of the indicia of intent is that the agreement lacks a severability clause, a strong indicium 26 of intent.

1 Respondent replies opposing Claimant’s theory about severability, citing Greenberg v.
2 Fischer, 156 N.Y.S.2d 350, 352 (Sup. Ct., Kings Cnty., N.Y. Oct. 5, 1956), for the proposition 3 that “where you can sever” unlawful contractual provisions, “you may reject the bad part and 4 retain the good.” And, as cited by Respondent, “after the Texas Supreme Court had invalidated an 5 employment agreement’s covenant not to compete, the court deemed the agreement otherwise 6 intact, because a separate section survived. Here too, at least three substantive provisions 7 remained intact in the Agreement at bar, including “Competitive Services,” “Competitive 8 Solicitation,” and “Competitive Intellectual Property Claims.”

9 To the Arbitrator, besides adopting the reasoning of Respondent on this point, believes it 10 would be manifestly illogical and contrary to law to invalidate the fee-shifting provision of this 11 NDA, where the Respondent prevailed on Constitutional grounds in a case that was vigorously 12 litigated. Thus, the Arbitrator declines to adopt the Claimant’s reasoning on this point.

13 C. There is a Reasonable Basis for a Fee Award and is Supported:

14 Claimant asserts that Respondent’s fee application is “speculative” and is “manifestly 15 unreasonable and unsupported. The first step in arriving at a fair and appropriate award of 16 attorneys’ fees under the lodestar method is to determine whether the number of hours claimed 17 were reasonably “expended from contemporaneous time sheets.” The Arbitrator disagrees.

18 Counsel for Respondent employed the “lodestar” method of calculating fees.⁶ Upon 19 examination of Counsel’s exhibits detailing the recordation of the hours expended on representing 20 Respondent, the law firms of Tycko and Public Justice, P.C. expended 698.5 hours in representing 21 Respondent, culminating in a compilation of Fees of $373,501.45. The fee calculation was based 22 on 623.5 hours expended by Tycko law firm with $323,686.20 requested, and 75.1 hours by 23 Public Justice, based on varying hourly rates for the respective firms, resulting in the total fee 24 amount claimed.

25 Mr. Zavareei of the Tycko law firm states that the firm undertook Respondent’s 26 representation against this claim without advance compensation from her, as she had no ability to 27 ⁶ The “lodestar” method is commonly used by judges and arbitrators to determine attorney fees for a prevailing party. The loadstar 28 is calculated by multiplying the reasonable number of hours by a reasonable hourly rate.

1 pay their legal fees. Thus, the firm represented her without knowing whether it would be paid.
2 However, it did have the expectation that should Respondent prevail, based on the provisions of 3 the NDA with its attorneys' fees provision, the firm would be compensated. Primary counsel for 4 Respondent, Mr. Zavareei, in his sworn declaration, indicates that he initially undertook her 5 representation to first protect her from the arbitration costs. Subsequent motion practice resulted 6 in shifting the cost burden to Claimants, as employer, because the Arbitrator ruled that the AAA
7 Employment Arbitration rules applied instead of the AAA Commercial Rules, with the cost 8 shifting to be revisited at the conclusion of the case to determine the prevailing party and, should 9 she not prevail, her ability to pay.

10 From the very beginning of the Arbitration, Counsel for Respondent challenged Claimant's 11 causes of action principally federal Constitutional grounds, a position that they consistently 12 pressed throughout the Arbitration litigation. The motion practice was extensive and consisted of 13 a number of filings and discovery disputes and all the research, writing, and litigation processes 14 that such motion practice entails. Counsel also researched and consulted expert witnesses 15 concerning damages. In addition, Counsel for Respondent monitored the unrelated but parallel 16 proceedings brought against former employees of Claimant, including several actions involving an 17 employee Denson, and an action Manigault-Newman. All of this work resulted, on balance, in a 18 favorable outcome for Respondent.

19 There is no point in recounting and belaboring the details of the amount of work required 20 in this arbitration, as the Arbitrator had a front-row seat during the litigation. Suffice it to say, 21 Counsel for Respondent engaged in a robust defense of their client, without any guarantee that 22 they would prevail and, for the most part with some reservations, the hours spent by Counsel for 23 Respondent are accepted by the Arbitrator.

24 A word about Counsel. The firm of Tycko clearly appears to be a quality firm, with first-25 rate credentials. Their product filed in this Arbitration has been first-class as has been the 26 representation of the Claimant by the two firms engaged, Harder, LLP, and Election Law, LLC.
27 All counsel on both sides are attorneys of substance and exceptionally competent. Counsels'

1 representation of their respective clients has been notably professional at all times. Thus, the 2 arguments by Claimant opposing the fee request by alleging that Respondent failed to adequately 3 document and support the hours she claims, is rejected. The Arbitrator will thus award fees, albeit 4 with some modifications.

5 Concerning the objection that the Respondent's time sheets are not contemporaneous is 6 likewise rejected. First of all, the practical problem is the number of attorneys and paralegals who 7 worked on this case made the compiling of expended hours difficult. Second, the Arbitrator
8 appreciates the ease of interpreting the timesheets in the format presented. Third, the Arbitrator 9 could have asked for the contemporaneous time entries from Counsel, but chose not to do so, 10 because the table of hours spent by Counsel was sufficiently specific to satisfy the Arbitrator that 11 the entries were accurate and not subject to question, with the exception of concerns of the 12 Arbitrator, discussed below. Thus, the Arbitrator notes that he has carefully examined their time 13 sheets and the work reportedly done on behalf of Respondent, and with certain exceptions 14 explained below, rejects the argument that these time sheets are unsupported claims for attorneys' 15 fees, because they are not contemporaneously maintained time records. It is obvious, given the 16 specifics and details of the time sheets, that great care and accuracy went into the compilation of 17 the fee accounting. Simply because the records are well organized and printed, does not detract 18 from their integrity and honesty. Fourth, Arbitration is intended to be a process that reduces costs 19 from what might occur in a traditional legal setting, requiring a certain amount of leeway in 20 processes that might inappropriately increase costs. This is one of those areas where such cost 21 could inappropriately increase (as will be discussed below). Finally, the Arbitrator chooses to rely 22 on the integrity of the fine and professional counsel presenting the time sheets as accurate. The 23 Arbitrator has no reason to question the ethics and honesty of Counsel of this reputable firm in 24 their representations.

25 d. The Arbitrator's Concerns:

26 However, the Arbitrator has calculated the hours spent and has reservations on the total 27 amount represented to have been expended in their representation and has some concerns

1 beginning first, with the number of hours expended in preparing for the fee request. Counsel from 2 Tycko represents that the firm spent 134.5⁷ hours in preparing its fee request, presumably 3 including any Public Justice calculation. This amount is excessive. Based on a 40-hour week, this 4 means that a firm paralegal, and any associated attorney involvement cost expended in the effort
5 would have had to spend full-time for almost 3 and ½ weeks to prepare the fee request. This figure 6 calculates as 21.5% of the entire hourly total of Tycko's 623.5 hours in its hourly calculations.
7 Fees on fees are acceptable. This figure is not acceptable. The arbitrator believes that a firm, of 8 the quality representing Respondent, should have been able to calculate its fees in no more than a 9 full 40-hour week, given the modern electronics and record-keeping that is available to a firm.
10 And, having crediting Tycko with possessing contemporaneous billing records, the firm should 11 not have had to expend such an enormous amount of time compiling them.

12 It is unclear from Tycko's submission whether the 27 hours it calls out as the number of 13 hours it reserved for what counsel "will spend on opposing Claimant's fee petition" and oral 14 argument, and whether that 27-hour charge is included in the 134.5 hours it billed for preparation 15 of fee petition. Accordingly, because the Arbitrator could not find a line item of 27 hours, he has 16 assumed that it is included in the 134.5 hours. Thus, because Claimant made no application for 17 fees in their brief on this matter, the Arbitrator subtracts first the 27 hours from the 134.5 hours, 18 and reduces, preliminarily, the gross number to 107.5 hours.

19 Based on the foregoing discussion, the Arbitrator thus reduces the total amount of hours 20 spent on this case by an additional 67.5 hours and allows 40 hours, or one week's work, full time, 21 on the average hourly rate, even though the rates were at the paralegal level.

22 Second, analyzing the total number of hours expended of 698.5 hours, which, if divided 23 into the original request of $373,501.60 Tycko and Public Justice billed at an average hourly rate 24 of $534.72, now reduced by 94.5 hours, to a total of 604 hours, and multiplied by the average 25 hourly rate of $534.72, equals $322,970.88. The Arbitrator recognizes that averaging the 26 attorneys' fees in this manner potentially obliterates the differences in billing rates from attorney

27 ⁷ This amount clashes with the number of 136.4 hours set forth in Respondent's brief. The Arbitrator could not discern from the 28 text why the number differs from the table of charges within the brief of 134.5. The Arbitrator chooses to use the lower number.

1 to attorney, and that this method of calculation might not be completely accurate or not seem fair, 2 but in the interests of economy, the Arbitrator would have had to expend a great deal of time and 3 effort to calculate the fees in this manner and has declined to do so.

4 In addition, in keeping with the Arbitrator's analysis of the number of hours expended to 5 defend Respondent, of the 698.5 hours expended, subjecting that number to the weekly equivalent, 6 that on a 40-hour week, an attorney, working continuously full-time on the case, would have 7 worked 8-hours per day, 5 days per week, 40 hours per week, for approximately 17.5 weeks, or 8 slightly over four and one third solid months, or approximately 88 days of full-time work. The 9 arbitrator, out of concern that the hours requested are not the product of dishonesty, but of likely 10 inefficiency (the Arbitrator wants it to be crystal-clear that he believes the Tycko and Public 11 Justice firms to be of high quality and impeccably honest). Nevertheless, the Arbitrator is 12 determined to arbitrarily reduce the total compensation of $322,970.88 by another 8%, in the 13 interests of fairness and to compensate for the inefficiency he believes occurred here, and thus 14 awards total fees of $297,133.20. Accordingly, the Arbitrator ORDERS that Respondent be 15 awarded attorneys' fees in the amount of $297,133.20, which number includes a share to the 16 Public Justice firm. The Arbitrator believes that Public Justice should probably receive 17 $43,189.95, a number that reflects its 13.3% share of the total fees requested minus its percentage 18 of the reduction. Thus, Public Justice suffers the effects of the reduction of Tycko's share of the 19 fees; but the Arbitrator will leave this to the respective Respondent's counsel as to settlement 20 between them on the proper amount to be shared. Expenses are also awarded as discussed below.

21 e. Respondent Is Entitled to Expenses.

22 Respondent seeks $6,151.86 in expenses. The NDA entitles the prevailing party to 23 "reasonable . . . costs." What this means is that a prevailing party should recover "reasonable, 24 identifiable out-of-pocket expenses which are ordinarily charged to clients." (Citations omitted).
25 The expenses requested are for conference calls, legal research, photocopies, court document 26 retrievals, secure file storage, and messenger deliveries. See Francis, 2012 WL 398769, at *9, 27 authority cited by Counsel, together with Chen v. Select Income REIT, No. 18-CV-10418 (GBD)

1 (KNF), 2019 WL 6139014, at *10 (S.D.N.Y. Oct. 11, 2019) (listing “photocopying, travel, 2 telephone costs, postage and computerized research” as sample “reasonable out-of-pocket
3 expenses that are charged to clients ordinarily” and incorporated into fee awards, (citing LeBlanc-4 Sternberg v. Fletcher, 143 F.3d 748, 763 (2d Cir. 1998))). The fees requested are supported by the 5 sworn declaration of Counsel, and, as such are accepted by the Arbitrator as legitimate.

6 f. Respondent’s Financial Condition Excuses Reimbursement:

7 The Arbitrator finds that Respondent is excused from splitting the costs of the Arbitration, 8 including arbitration costs and Arbitrator fees because of her current financial condition. Indeed, 9 arguably, as Respondent points out, the arbitration fees, including those for the Arbitrator, come 10 under the “costs” component of the prevailing party’s entitlement to “fees and costs.” However, 11 even if they did not, Respondent clearly comes under the employment rules. Recall the 12 Arbitrator’s previous order of April 26, 2020, wherein the Arbitrator recognized that under New 13 York law in an employment case, the employer would be responsible for up-front costs and 14 Respondent would be excused from contributing until the conclusion of the case. Then, at such 15 time, after an examination of her financial condition, whether a determination is made whether she 16 could afford the fees, only then would she be required to split the fees. Counsel for Respondent, 17 however, has adequately documented Respondent’s financial condition such that the Arbitrator 18 finds she is excused from any contribution towards arbitration costs in this Arbitration.

19 For example, Respondent presented information in her brief on fees and costs, including 20 her Declaration that confirmed that she cannot afford her share of the arbitral costs. Respondent 21 submitted significant evidence of her poor financial condition, including a recent account 22 summary from her bank account, which showed that she is functionally insolvent, with her only 23 compensation coming from unemployment compensation, although she had just obtained a full-24 time position. Nevertheless, as the evidence presented demonstrates, she lives from paycheck-to-25 paycheck. Thus, the Arbitrator Orders, in keeping with his order of April 26, 2020, Respondent 26 shall be excused from payment of the fees and costs and Claimant shall continue to be held 27 responsible for the Fees and Costs under the AAA Employment Fee Schedule.

1 IV. CONCLUSION:

2 Accordingly, and based on the foregoing discussion, the Arbitrator finds:

- 3 1. Respondent is the prevailing party within the meaning of the NDA.
- 4 2. The Arbitrator rejects Claimant's position that because Respondent's false claim of 5 battery against Candidate in the separate federal lawsuit constituted 6 of bad faith and because of the inequity of it, she should be deprived of her status 7 as the prevailing party for the reasons stated in this ORDER.
- 8 3. Respondent shall be awarded expenses in the amount of $6,151.86, which shall 9 be paid to Tycko firm to reimburse it.
- 10 4. The Arbitrator finds that Respondent is awarded fees, which are to be paid in the 11 respective amounts to Tycko and Public Justice. The total fees and costs in 12 this matter are $297,133.20 plus costs (expenses) of $6,151.86 for a grand total of 13 $303,285.06.
- 14 5. The administrative fees of the American Arbitration Association totaling $2,950.00 15 and the compensation of the arbitrator totaling $43,948.10 shall be borne Claimant.
